

In the data there is evidence that when engaging in potentially risky, dangerous or 'extreme' drug related practices, collective online communication amongst those for whom this is 'normal', collectively express a harm reduction ethos