This project is about how to make research more accessible to visually impaired researchers.

The project has been created with Extant, a performing arts company for visually impaired performers.

The project will include performance to show how research can be shared in different ways.

The project will have three parts.

The team will interview visually impaired university students and staff.

They will ask them what they find difficult about accessing university.

Then, the team will review writing about access for visually impaired researchers.

The team will make a performance to share the results of their work.
