Council Tax for PhD Students

Most full time students on courses lasting an academic year or more are exempt and do not have to pay.

When do PhD students become liable to pay council tax?

Before Submission
Up until submission you may request a council tax exemption letter.

After Submission
After submission there will be a brief period where you are exempt from council tax whilst waiting for your viva (usually ten weeks)

After Viva
When you have had your viva, if you are given corrections you would then have to provide additional information to the council.

The additional information would be:

- A student status letter confirming your new end date.
- A letter from your supervisor detailing your attendance and the level of corrections you will need to undertake.

Your case for exemption will be assessed on an individual basis by the Council.

Re-submission
When you have re-submitted you are no longer exempt from council tax.

Most full time students on courses lasting an academic year or more are exempt and do not have to pay.

When do PhD students become liable to pay council tax?

Before Submission
Up until submission you may request a council tax exemption letter.

After Submission
After submission there will be a brief period where you are exempt from council tax whilst waiting for your viva (usually ten weeks)

After Viva
When you have had your viva, if you are given corrections you would then have to provide additional information to the council.

The additional information would be:

- A student status letter confirming your new end date.
- A letter from your supervisor detailing your attendance and the level of corrections you will need to undertake.

Your case for exemption will be assessed on an individual basis by the Council.

Re-submission
When you have re-submitted you are no longer exempt from council tax.