Yorkshire heat

Thursday 2 February,
7-9pm

Adelphi Room, Crucible
Theatre, 55 Norfolk Street,
S1 1DA

The international science communication competition is back for 2017 and the University of Sheffield is hosting the Yorkshire heat. Come and watch the region's scientists compete in a battle to inform, inspire and entertain! We are delighted to announce that Simon Watt - writer, science-communicator and TV presenter - will be compering this year's event.

FameLab is a communications competition designed to engage and entertain by breaking down science, technology and engineering concepts into three minute presentations. Contestants from around the world take part armed only with their wits and a few props - the result is an unpredictable, enlightening and exciting way to encourage your curiosity and find out about the latest research.
