INTRODUCTION

Our programme accreditations – what they mean for you.

Completing a module or programme which has the seal of approval from a professional body can give you access to more academic resources and will strengthen employability whilst a student or as a recent graduate. Engagement at an early stage will certainly pay-off when a future employer encourages you to acquire relevant professional qualifications.

This document details the Management School's current accreditations and exemptions – it is updated on an ongoing basis and if you have any questions, please email mgt.professionalaccreditation@shef.ac.uk.

For current students, membership of a professional body is often cheaper than their standard fee and could give you the edge in placement applications or the graduate job market. From news updates, to student-focused events and access to publications and industry figures, many of the organisations offer online services and regional chapters which will help with your academic work and career prospects.

Give more breadth to your reading and kick-start your professional network, while also improving the CV – membership of a professional organisation shows a commitment to your preferred area of work which will impress prospective employers.

Finally, if you're aiming to be a chartered practitioner in the future, choosing certain modules and programmes will lead to exemption from assessments which you may be asked to take in a few years' time. Check the most up-to-date version of this document for details.

The Management School is here to support you, so pop into the Employability Hub or get in touch via email if you have any questions.
